This close – if you're at the right place at the right time in the right boat. That would be the Canal do Faial channel between the islands of Faial and Pico in the Azores, populated by more spawning sperm whales than just about anywhere else. It's also a haven for many other whale and dolphin species on their migratory route between the North and South Atlantic.

In June, this is one of the world's best whale-watching sites – and we'll be right there on our exploration of Atlantic Paradises June 24-July 2.

You won't believe how truly paradisaical Madeira and the Azores are. Not just the weather and the beauty, but how safe, calm, and serene they are, how friendly everyone is – so friendly because everyone here is at peace with themselves. You'll discover your inner peace here too. While never being bored as there's always something exciting to see and do. Like being this close to a baby sperm whale.

You owe it to yourself to make these Atlantic Paradises a part of your life. (Glimpses of our breathtaking world #195).
