On Monday night (4/18), Malcolm Nance, a longtime analyst for the network and a former U.S. naval intelligence officer, appeared on MSNBC's "The ReidOut" hosted by Joy Reid.

Nance told Reid that he joined the International Legion of Territorial Defense in Ukraine.

"The more I saw of the war going on, the more I thought, I'm done talking.

It's time to take action here. So, about a month ago, I joined the international legion here in Ukraine, and I am here to help this country fight, you know, what essentially is a war of extermination."

The international legion has more than 20,000 volunteers from 52 countries who enlisted to help Ukraine repel Russian forces from the war-torn country.

"I spent quite a bit of time here in the pre-war period and when the invasion happened, I had friends who were in Donetsk, who were in the Ukrainian army, who were writing to us and telling us, 'We're not going to survive tonight. We've been hit 500 times.' This is an existential war, and Russia has brought it to these people and is mass-murdering civilians. And there are people here like me who are going to do something about it."

TTP salutes Malcolm Nance for risking his life in defense of freedom and humanity.

Malcolm Nance is a US Navy Senior Chief Petty Officer (ret) who at age 60 is now fighting in armed defense for Ukraine.
