Sometimes you run across something that no matter how it grosses you out, you have to take a picture of it. The thousand year-old medina or walled city of Fez is a World Heritage Site as the spiritual and cultural capital of Morocco. Uniquely epitomizing this is the stall of the camel butcher in the medina's vast bazaar. To garner the attention of ladies shopping for their family's dinner, he proudly displays the head of the camel whose fresh meat is on sale. Traveling in Morocco is always an adventure.
